

JACK'S DYSTOPIA

2052, 40 years and 10 games after the 2012 London Olympics, it had returned, disappointingly for other nations, good for the population of London. However, this time it had returned, not to a flourishing city of different communities and cultures excitedly awaiting the games, but to a cavernous black hole sucking everything bad into it and regurgitating the hopes and dreams of the people of the city.

Many had left, gone to other countries, Australia, Americas and its neighbouring Great British countries populations had grown considerably during the downfall of England and its capital London.

This downfall, as it is known to the people who one walked briskly down the roads, trying not to be late to work, who once laughed happily in a city well known for its accepting occupants and communities, had turned the Queen saving country of England into what it has become today, a place for slithering snakes of dishonesty, dishonestly whispering to the Olympic organizers that London was the place to be in 2052. Behind the facade, which had been created by the new population of England and London, was definitely not the place to be in they year of 2052. A revival of the Nazis, KKK, EDL, and unlikeable people was where the athletes, fans and Olympics were going. These people were intelligent however, because they had cleverly created this facade of open friendliness. The olympics were coming to London and I was very happy about it.
